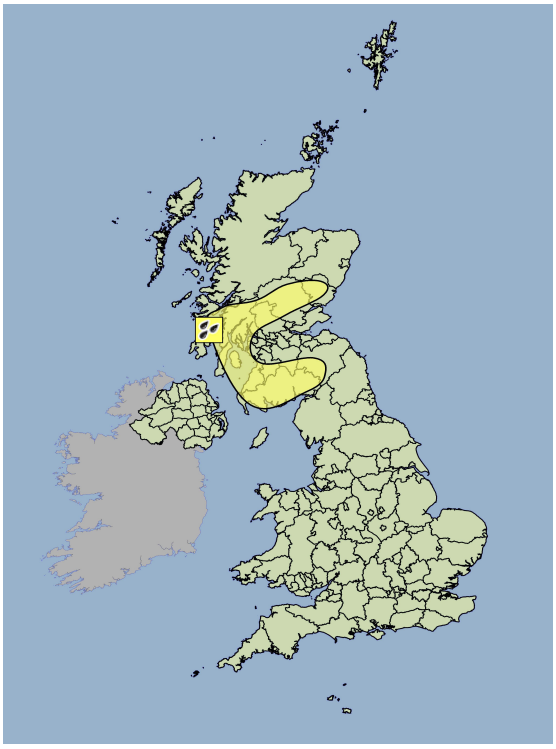
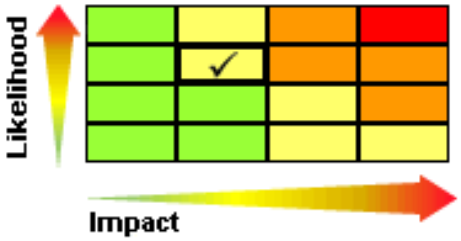
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The end of the cold spell heralds a change to more changeable conditions as fronts come in off the Atlantic. The one sweeping through on Friday will be particularly active, bringing 20-40 mm quite widely and locally 50 mm on high ground. It will also turn windy with gusts up to 60 mph on costs, and 40-50 mph inland.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 03:00 on Fri, 22nd Jan 2016 until 12:00 on Fri, 22nd Jan 2016

A band of wet and windy weather will cross the country overnight and during Friday morning. This coupled with snow melt will lead to surface water, and spray on roads.

Please be aware of the likelihood of localised flooding and of difficult driving conditions.
